School building at Doranal Tarikere Taluk

The village of Doranal has about 200 houses with a population of 657 There is a Village Elementary School with five classes, from the Infant up to the 3rd Standard, and one teacher The number of boys on the rolls is 28 The School is located in an old building in the centre of the village amidst dirty surroundings and consists of one room only measuring about 10 feet by 20 feet Considering the population of the village, the number of boys attending the School is very small Taking the male population at 330 the number of boys of school-going age would be 50. It was explained to me that that number would have been at School if there was accommodation in the building and there were one or two additional teachers They prayed that Government may be pleased to sanction the construction of a new building outside the village, near the roadside, which was a healthy locality

The provision of a new building appears desirable, and the Education Department will be addressed in the matter, the Inspector General of Education being informed also that the villagers preferred a prayer to His Highness the Maharaja during the recent tour and that His Highness was graciously pleased to direct that the matter may be favourably considered.
